

In conclusion, this work is a concise and direct monograph, adequately grounded in the historical context without getting bogged down in the details, making it suitable reading for undergraduate courses. Likewise, advanced researchers and graduate students will do well to take note of Richmond's impressive use of UT-Arlington's often-untapped resources, the Yucatan Collection's microfilmed documents.

Mark Lentz
Utah Valley University, Department of History

About the authors

GABRIELA RIVERA ACOSTA

Licensed in Ethnohistory by ENAH, Master and Doctor in Mesoamerican Studies at UNAM. Teaching in undergraduate and graduate programs at ENAH. Currently, in postdoc program of Science of Anthropology of the same institution. Related publications: "Territorio y Glifo Emblem en el Clásico Maya", "The Soldiers of the Virgin. Mechanisms of Cultural Survival in a Maya Rebellion in XVIIIth century Chiapas", "A charla sobre el geroglífico Guerra Estrella". Area of investigation: the war in the pre-Columbian Maya culture, the war in the Native American cultures, colonial rebellions in the Maya area, sacrifice and rituality between the Maya of Classic period.

FELIX KUPPRAT

He is an archaeologist and anthropologist specialized in the archaeology of the Maya area. He has conducted research and collaborated in various archaeological projects in Mexico and Guatemala. He studied Anthropology in Bonn, Germany, and received his PhD in Mesoamerica Studies from the National Autonomous University of Mexico (UNAM). Since 2019 he has been a faculty member at the Institute for Anthropology at UNAM. Currently he investigates processes of urbanization during the transition from the Preclassic to the Classic in Yaxnohcah, Campeche.

ERIK BOOT

He studied anthropology at the University of Leiden. His work dealt with Amerindian cultures and their writing systems. He specifically focused on Maya epigraphy, iconography and cultural history.